Gr 3-7 • Highlighting 19 themed trails through three of the world's most-recognizable cities, these well-indexed guides are loaded with kid appeal and fascinating facts that are sure to intrigue any student (and please their parents). Three to six pages are devoted to each topic; areas of interest include animals, the arts, fashion, food, sports, history, shopping, and underground spaces. Each volume also offers a section on ghosts and haunted places, a surefire draw for young adventurers. Trails are initially marked on a large map of the city and progress logically from one geographic point to the next, using high-quality photos and colorful cartoon illustrations to describe each attraction. One vertical two-page photo presents the tallest or most iconic structure in each city (New York's Statue of Liberty, London's Shard, and Paris's Eiffel Tower). Informational blurbs are short, concise, and well written, with occasional vocabulary (e.g., kinetic) explained in context. Fun facts are highlighted in scallop-edged boxes, and specific bits of research appear in periodic smartphone images. Famous (and infamous) landmarks (e.g., Central Park, the Globe Theatre, and Versailles) are featured in each, but unusual places (e.g., Drummer's Grove, Spitalfields, and the Wall of Love) also make the cut, as do fun activities, such as playing music on a New York subway art installation, eating Blumenthal's "meat fruit" (London), and walking through a Parisian "living" horror show. VERDICT Ideal travel companions for elementary and middle schoolers; lifesavers for parents. • Nancy Menaldi-Scanlan, formerly at LaSalle Academy, Providence, RI

Excited to use this book for an upcoming trip- the images are great for my 9 year old and it will be great for him to have this on the trip and note the images to what he did and say.

This is not just a great book for kids.....I have been to London several times and still had a lot to learn! Wonderful graphics and images!

We are using this book to engage our granddaughter prior to our trip to London together. She get's to make some requests as we put plans into action. Written for kids 3-6th grade.

I was hoping for a bit more depth, but the kids like it and it has some great starting points for writing reports on specific topics that interest them.

Such a fun book for the kids, it has great real pictures, easy to read blurbs and stories... now they want to go there!

nephew loved it!

The book is very entertaining and interesting, but it does contain inaccurate information. For instance, in the section on Westminster Abbey it states Henry VIII is buried there. That makes me think the rest of the book probably wasn't fact-checked very closely, which is disappointing in a book for children, which (one would hope) would be educational.
