Margaret Van Sicklen, self-described "origami swami," is the author of Joy of Origami and the bestselling Origami Page-A-Day calendar. She lives in New York City and Santa Barbara, California.

I absolutely love this daily calendar which features a new origami creation (almost) every day. The paper is perfectly square and is patterned on the back, which makes it easy to create origami according to the calendar's instructions-- I just use the previous day's entry to make today's origami. The paper comes in the following colors: purple, pink, orange, yellow, green, light blue, and dark blue. The calendar has approximately 6 origami instructions each week (Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday/Sunday). Some days the instructions require newspaper, standard printer paper, or dollar bills; on rare days there's information about the art of origami instead of origami instructions. Although at first I didn't like this aspect of the calendar, at 26 days into the year I have come to appreciate it, as sometimes I get behind or need a break from the daily origami grind.I highly recommend this daily calendar. :)

Fun calendar!You use the previous day's instructions for the current day's instructions.No need to buy origami paper.I wish I did buy separate origami paper, so I could go back to the instructions in the future.As the year went on, the instructions got more difficult. Tthe calendar has done a good job of teaching you techniques as the year goes on.

It's a neat little calendar that gives you something to do. I didn't realize every single day doesn't have an origami project. The weekends are shared -- 1 page for 2 days. Also I noticed that some days don't have a project. Some of the projects are challenging. Also, tried to use the actual page for the project... and that doesn't work out well :)

This has been a fun product. I did get this calendar before a few years ago and some of the designs are similar or the same as the previous year, but not all.The paper in this one is not quite as high quality as the previous year I got this.

So much fun....

I have shared these around the office as I only recently bought them so had several months of past origamis.I am not good at them, but we have a lot of fun in our down time.

I thought about purchasing an origami book for my nephew for Christmas, reconsidered when I saw this cool calendar! 365 days of origami?! Super fun!

My son who is 9, purchased the 2011 calendar for himself last year. He is obsessed! He runs downstairs each day to do the next origami. He has asked for the 2012 calendar for both him and his brother! The downside is we have origami all over the place!
