It's not monsters or aliens or dinosaurs, but the jokes are still kid friendly. I've been reading all sorts of preschool, middle grade and YA books to beef up the family kids' library. I've also been using an older Kindle Touch to create a traveling library that has Kindle books for each age group, and then Kindle books aimed at each individual grandchild, (by interests or just because the hero or heroine has the same name and it's fun to read about somebody who has your name). Anyway, I just never paid attention to joke books until one of the kids started telling me Knock Knock jokes, about half of which he understood and all of which he thought were hysterical. So I thought, "hey, joke books". The words are basic and the sentences are simple. The word play can be sort of obvious, but it's still word play and it can sometimes be very clever. Knock Knock jokes are actually interactive, since you take turns being the straight man. For a pre-reader or a brand new reader joke books can be the perfect way to have fun with books and words. That brings us to the IP Factly/ IP Grinning books, which are just great for readers somewhere around five years old and up. If you look at all the IP Factly Kindle books there seem to be three categories - Knock Knock jokes; themed collections; general humor. Except for Knock Knock jokes they are all in the "Question and Answer" style, e.g. "What do you call a...?, Why did the ...? Where do you keep a ...?" That's great because a question builds up excitement for the punchline payoff, and half the time the kid gets the joke and the other half he giggles anyway because the joke is still fun as long as you try to sell it. And these are pretty good jokes, split about evenly between puns, ("What's the best TV to have at Halloween? - A big Scream TV.), and more advanced jokes, (Who's the king of your school desk? - the ruler.) So, all in all these particular books strike me as very good examples of the form, and very much worth considering for your little reader. At the least, they should be good for a few nice laughs. Please note that I found this book while browsing Kindle freebies. I have no connection at all to either the author or the publisher of this book.

Grandson loves it. He loves to tell jokes and these are easy enough for him to remember....he is only 6.

My kids like to read jokes and this one has cute and very appropriate jokes for younger kids. I thought most of them were pretty cute.

This book was incredibly funny as you probably figured out from my rating and title. I recommend this book to anyone who loves animals and is looking for a good laugh right on their phone, tablet, or whatever you may have.

The jokes are for kids about 2 years older than my granddaughter, but they are funny. The kids will grow into them. We did have a few good chuckles even though one child is only 4

I like jokes. I like the dog cat and bird jokes I would recommend this book to my friend Haley Estal and my friend Tyler Rockwood and his brother Ethan Rockwood and to my best friend Grace Robinson

I bought this for my daughters to read on their Kindles. Cute book and kept them laughing for hours.

Kid friendly of course. Pretty funny jokes too.

Like what is black and white and purple like this book because it's funny i would recommend this to 5
