Pat Liddy is a writer, broadcaster, inveterate walker, and one of Dublin's most renowned exponents of his native city's heritage.

Recently, I traveled to Ireland and spent 9 days in Dublin and found this guide a wealth of information. The tour of the Viking part of the city was great for also getting to know your way around. Pat lays out the guide in such a way, you soon realize how small a city Dublin really is and how easy it is to walk around. The different neighborhoods and favors they present. There is much more to Dublin than Temple Bar. I lucked into Pat Liddy a few days later. The tour was a general overview of the city which included an active Viking dig site that was gone a later in the week. Dublin has so many faces for the traveler, a intimate guide is a blessing since it helps you to see below the surface. The 9 days was better organized and focused on experiencing Dublin. For a short or long stay here, this is a guide I can fully endorse. His guided tours is well worth the time and money.

I was looking for a book that would give me the history of buildings and streets while walking around Dublin. This book is full of good, detailed information but, unfortunately, is presented in a way that would require a lot of reading while walking. What's needed is a book that allows the walker to quickly refer to a building or neighborhood, perhaps by including illustrations that can be understood at a glance.

An excellent way to divide your trip to Dublin. Most people say to only spend 1-2Days in Dublin before moving on, but there's so much to see. I'm using this guide for a 3 day trip. The maps are helpful, list landmarks and places of interest, and divide walks into historical and literary themes; there's even a leafy suburb walk.

Great. Very useful.

I am planning to visit Dublin and I want to walk and explore sites connected to literary figures as well as famous areas. I enjoyed this book because it has route maps and they seem to be easy to follow. Beautiful color illustrations of everything I'd like to see when I get there. If you want to appreciate this wonderful city as I do. This is the book I want to have with me.

Top notch !! Our trip to Dublin will be great thanks to this book !!!
