ITMB Publishing is a leading publisher of international travel maps, including a series of country, regional and city maps of Russia and other post-Soviet states.

I have found the ITM Canada maps to be generally useful though printed on paper. Having purchased enough of them recently, I find they provide enough detail and information that I like. Paper media holds down the cost but durability is questionable, especially for a street map of a large metropolis which means it will be folded and refolded. All in all I found the map useful and covered most of the areas of interest.

I bought this map hoping it would be like my other laminated maps. Unfortunately, this map was just too huge to be practical for a tourist!

When going to Moscow unless you live there, and yes my wife is Russian but does not live in Moscow. Tour guide books, are helpful but once you figure out what you want to see you need a map. The map is very helpful as you can see the subway metro lines and using them is a must unless you want to use taxi and be stuck in traffic all day and pay more for taxi than your hotel room. The train stations if your traveling out of town there are six so you better know which one to take. I highly recommend using this map.

The map is very clear and, most importantly, the Metro lines are superimposed, some maps just show metro stations and leave you to find them on a map. Further, principal tourist sights are clearly identified.

It's my fault for not noticing that this map was not published by Borch. It's a large paper map more suited to a driver. It does not include a compact section of downtown, suitable for walking tours. It does include Metro lines but they can be hard to follow on the larger maps. May find a better version when I arrive in Moscow.

Apparently nobody makes a heavy-duty laminated map of Moscow, so this was the best available. It's flimsy and not very easy to read, but with so few choices, it will have to do.

don't really need it and hard to read, unless you know russian. will take it to share with someone else
